SEVENTH GENERATION

Jared[1] Jared[2] Jared[3] Joseph[4] Seth[5] Allen[6]

11. Ephraim Allen[7] Talbot, born in Dighton, Massachusetts, 25 Feb. 1812; [2;166] died in Marshall County, Mississippi, 9 March 1877.
He Married 19 Dec. 1840 Elizabeth N. Loving, born ca 1824 in Tennessee; died 4 [gs] June 1852, daughter of Thomas N. Loving. She was buried in Hillcrest Cemetery in Holly Springs, Mississippi.

Children, born in Holly Springs, Mississippi

12. i. Allen[8], b. 27 Sept. 1841; d. 23 Oct. 1923; m. (1) Mary Virginia McDonald (2) Telisia Wiggs.

Ii. William Henry, b. 7 June 1845; d. 17 Sept. 1862 in the Civil War. Mustered into service 3 March 1862 at Ripley, Mississippi by Capt. J. H. Buchanan at the age of 16 years. He served in Company B, 2nd Regiment of the Mississippi Infantry, and was killed in the Battle of Antietam (Sharpsburg); State of Maryland on the John Poffenbergers farm. Personal Status was: Single, age 16 years, Height, 6 ft. 1 in. Brown eyes, Light hair, Fair skin

Ephraim Allen[7] Talbot and his brother Francis of Dighton, Massachusetts came to Marshall County, Mississippi just after the county was formed. It was early in 1836, the United States Government had offered for sale the Chickasaw lands of north Mississippi, ceded by the tribe in 1832 and comprising over six million acres. Advertised widely as “cotton’s last frontier”, The Chickasaw Cession became a focal point for investment and speculation in this era known as the Flush Times. Marshall County, created by legislative act on 9 Feb. 1836, quickly achieved a position of eminence in the region.

Nowhere in the Chickasaw Cession was the phenomenal development during the Flush Times more dramatically manifested than in the county seat of Holly Springs. Although only a crude tavern stood on the town site in early 1835, by fall a west Tennessee trader had formed a partnership with nineteen other men to purchase, develop and sell a burgeoning village. By the time the town was incorporated on 12 May, 1837, Holly Springs was already a miniature cotton capital with churches, schools, and numerous business houses.

The earliest statement of record is Ephraim Allen’s[7] marriage, 19 Dec. 1840 in Holly Springs, Mississippi to Elizabeth N. Loving. Consent was given by her father, as she was only 16 years of age. The marriage was performed by J. W. Davis, pastor of the Christian Church. It is assumed that one or both were members of the church. During the 1820’s and 1830’s it was common to call members of the Church of Christ, “Campbellities” or “Reformed Baptist”. As such, a deed was issued 13 Jan. 1837 to the trustees of the Reformed Baptist for lot #272 (one lot away was the Baptist Church Lot) in Holly Springs for the sum of one dollar. Her father, Thomas N. Loving was the only trustee of the Reformed Baptist Church to the Church (or Church of Christ of the era) in 1846.

Ephraim Allen[7] does not appear on the tax rolls until 1841, when he began buying and trading lots in the town of Holly Springs. By 1850 he had his own drug store on the town square and was the owner of slaves. He and his brother were both druggists. In 1850 Marshall County led the state in cotton production, and its golden decade had just begun. Added now to the pioneer log wellings and white painted cottages of Holly Springs were a host of brick mansions in the Greek and Gothic Revival styles. From the beginning the town had been recognized not only for its beauty and refinement, but also for the excellence of its schools.

Ephraim Allen[7] and Elizabeth's marriage was short lived as she died 4 June 1852, leaving him with two young sons. She was buried in the historic Hillcrest Cemetery, which contains many fence designs and monuments that illustrate the iconography associated with the Victorian cult of death. Her gravestone, now broken, but still standing reads; Elizabeth N, wife of E. A. Talbot, who died June 4, 1852, age 28 years. She was buried in the David Plot, and there is an unmarked lot beside her. Between 1855 and 1860, before the Civil War, Francis Talbot returned to his native home in the east. Their mother, Mary had since left Dighton and had gone to live with her daughter, Anna Maria Smith in Newport, Rhode Island. Francis joined his family, and remained there. There is no further record of him in the south. In 1861, he married Sophia A. Allman of Newport, Rhode Island.

About the time Francis Talbot left Mississippi, Ephraim Allen[7] took his young sons Allen[8] and Willaim Henry and moved to Memphis, Tennessee. They lived in the 7th war, which comprised all that portion of the city lying south of Adams Street (extended) and east of Bayou Gayoso. Their place of residence was east and south of DeSota between Vance and Elliot. It was from here that both sons returned to Ripley, Mississippi to join the Confederate Army. Allen enlisted 1 May 1861 and William Henry enlisted 3 March 1862.

The population of Memphis in 1860 was 22,623. At this time Ephraim Allen[7] and a partner, Frank B. Dancy had a drug store. It is listed in the William's Memphis Directory City Guide and Business Mirror (1859 & 1860) as follows: Vol. #1 M/f 705:4 & 5 Page 319-359-360-363.

Talbot Street runs from the river to St. Martin Street. Tradition is that the street was named for Ephraim Allen[7] Talbot, The Union Army invaded Memphis in 1862 and occupied the city until 1862, at which time they also took over the building that housed the drug store and converted it into a hospital. Of course Ephraim Allen[7] was forced to leave, and it is not known just where he resided until after the war when he again appears on the deed books in Holly Springs, Mississippi to sell some property.

Holly Springs, which contributed a number of important leaders to the Confederate cause, suffered greatly during the Civil War. It was the scene of sixty raids, the most famous being the daring cavalry raid led by Confederate General Earl Van Down on General Ulysses S. Grant's base of supplies on 20 Dec. 1862.

Though the Federal Army occupied Holly Springs immediately after the war and remained for several years, the town experienced a period of rebuilding in the late 1860's and the 1870's. The devastating yellow fever epidemic of 1878 ended the era and brought to a close the town's heroic age in the nineteenth century.

After the war Ephraim Allen[7] appears in Tippah County (now Benton Co.) with his only surviving son, Allen[8] and his family. He was still active in buying and selling property as late as 1876. His largest acquisition of property was the 5600 acres that he acquired in Tippah County (Now Brenton, Co.), east of the Basis Meridian of the Chickasaw Cession. His last statement of record is an indenture record 1 March 1876 in Benton Co., Mississippi. He died9 March 1877, at the age of 65 years, and 12 days, in Marshall Co., Mississippi [Arnold G. Talbot-Talbot Tree MS Chart], but believed by family members to be buried in an unmarked, long since lost grave at Friendship Cemetery, near Ashland, Mississippi.

EIGHTH GENERATION

12. Allen[8] Talbot (Thomas Allen), born 27 Sep. 1841 in Holly Springs (Marshall County) Mississippi. Died 23 Oct. 1923 in Sitka, (Sharp County) Arkansas. It is believed the name of Thomas Allen was given to him at birth by his parents. Being the first born, he more than likely was named for both of his grandfathers. In the 1850 census, the name was given as Allen T., but on all records for the remainder of his life, he used only one name……Allen.

When the war clouds began to gather over the south, Allen was living in Memphis, Tennessee with his father, Ephraim Allen[7] and brother, William Henry. He learned of two volunteer companies, based in Ripley, Mississippi. He traveled to Ripleyto join the O'Conner Rifles, 2nd Regiment, Mississsippi Volunteers, under the Capt. John H. Buchanan. On 30 April 1861 the two companies, (C'Conner Riflers and Magnolia Rifles) assembled at the county seat where, at a parade and review, they were presented with flags. That of the O'Conner Rifles was presented by Mrs. C. A. Green.

The mem then marched to Sauls bury over the ridge road that during the next four years was to know the tread of thousands of soldiers both the north the and south, and the next day boarded the cars of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad for the last leg of their journey to Corinth. Almost immediately upon their arrival, the O'Connor Rifles were incorporated into Company B. 2nd Regt. of the Mississippi Infantry. The regiment was then sent by rail to Lynchburg, Virginia, where they were mustered into the Confederate Army, 10 May 1861. A few days later with the 11th Regt. and the 2nd Battalion of Mississippi, they were sent to Harpers Ferry, where they joined the General Joseph H. Johnston's Army of the Shenandoah.

Allen[8] was wounded in the Battle of Bull Run (Manassas) and hospitalized in Charlottesville, Virginia. In Feb, 1862 his enlistment was extended for two years, with a bounty of $50.00 and a 46 day furlough. He was appointed Corporal under Major G. W. Jones, April 1862. Appears on a roll of non-commissioned officers at the Orange Court House, Virginia for extra duty as Ambulance Sergy. in 1863. He was detailed as Brigade Quartermaster Sergt. under Major J. S. Reed in Aug. 1863. He was in sick camp in Black Water and Ashland, Virginia and was paroled at Appomattox Court House, Virginia, 9 April 1865.

He carried with him during the war, a small pocket size book in which he recorded dates, places, ect. It is written in pencil and hard to decipher. It is evident that he knew the McDonald family before the war, as the following notes will show. It appears that his father made two entries about selling the stock of the drug store, and a final entry was made in 1923 when the family was living in Sitka, Arkansas.

In 1865 when the war was over, Allen[8] returned to Tippah Co. and married his sweetheart, Mary Virginia McDonald, 15 Jan. 1867. She was born ca 1848 in Mississippi, the daughter of James L. McDonald (born ca 1815 in Tennessee) and wife, Eliza L. __, (born ca 1814 in Virginia). The McDonalds were one of the early pioneer families of Tippah and Benton County area. They acquired a lot of property and by 1860 were the owners of 31 slaves and 6 slave houses. According to the 1870 census, the Talbot and McDonald families were both residing in Tippah County, with a post Office address of Salem. The town of Salem, now extinct, is located in what is Benton County, today. At the same time, Allen's[8] occupation is listed as a druggist.

By June 1880, Allen and Mary Virginia had five children. They were William Henry, Mary Virginia, Annie Ephraim, Minnie and Van Allen. Her health was failing, as she was suffering from a lung disease. They thought her health might improve if she was in a different climate, so the Talbot and McDonald families decided to move to Florida. In preparation for leaving, Allen sold some of their property and in so doing, deeded the Friendship (Methodist) Church of Ashland, Mississippi, two acres of land for a church and cemetery. It is reasonable to believe that his father, Ephraim Allen is buried in this cemetery, rather than with his mother in the Hillcrest Cemetery in Holly Springs. Neither grave place is marked.

The following newspaper articles were taken from;

THE ASHLAND REGISTER Sept. 2, 1880

In Florida: Since our return from our summer resort, we have sadly missed that little circle of our friends who left 1st of August for Florida, that lovely land where the orange ever grows and flowers are ever blooming. James L. McDonaldn lived right here, and upon this spot shot the wild deer when still the red man roamed through this his native forest. Later with sturdy arm he tilled the soil here, and later still for half a century this was his home. He was known here affluence and poverty, happiness and sorrow, and amid all the eventful scenes of life, he has been known as a man filled with Mrs. E. L. McDonald, the companion of his bosom for many, many years, has shared his joys and sorrows here and with him raised and buried a family, save two, here. With true devotion she still clings to him, and by her multiplied womanly graves won and for long, long years, enjoyed her universal esteem. Allen Talbot[8] was one of the earliest acquaintances we had here and we found him on down to the present time a devoted friend upon every occasion and that never failed. He was raised here, and the people showed their confidence in him by entrusting him with perhaps the most important office in the county, that of Chancery Clerk, which he filled with unalloyed integrity and skill.

He has accumulated a fine property here and was doing well, but the ill health of his wife alone caused him to seek a more Southern clime. Mr. McDonald and wife and Mrs. Loving went with them. There is something touching in the tenacity with which this remnant of a once large and happy family clings together. They are greatly missed by this people. We have not hear from them since they reached their destination; but at last accounts on the road Mrs. Talbot was greatly improved. We earnestly hope she will completely recover and that the blessings of prosperity and happiness rich as the france of the magnolia groves in their now flowery land may ever cluster about all of time. Since going to press we learn that Mrs. Talbot died in Trussville, Ala., on 25th of August. Only her husband was with her, the others had gone ahead. Our sorrow is inexpressible.

Allen Talbot[8] coming back. We have received the following post card from our friend Allen Talbot[8], who went to Florida for the health of his wife, who died on the way, as the readers of the "Register" duly learned;

Fort Mead Sept. 27, 1880

Friend Bradley; Please change "Register" from Fort Mead, Florida to Ashland, Ben Co., Mississippi. Explanation when we meet.

Your friend, Allen Talbot

Thursday, Aug. 18, 1881

Mr. Wm. Hull and Mr. Allen Talbot[8.] were both in our office, Monday. There are none more genial, wholesouled and hearty than these two gentlemen, and none more welcome ever to our sanctum.

Telisia Wiggs was born in Tippah County, Mississippi, 11 Oct. 1859, the eldest daughter of Dr. Martin Luther Wiggs (born ca 1833 in Tennessee) and wife Sarah Elizabeth Finger (born ca 1841 in Mississippi). In the spring of 1880, Telisia lost both of her parents. They were living in Saulsbury, Tennessee, when both of her parents took pneumonia and died within a week of each other. Telisia, being the elder of the family took her brothers and sisters back to Benton County, Mississippi to live with her grandparents, the John Finger family. Her uncle, Simon Spight Finger was appointed her guardian. He remained her close friend and advisor for life.

The Finger family and the recently widower Allen Talbot[8]0 were both living in Township 2 of Benton County, not far from each other when they met. It must have been a whirlwind romance as they were married 6 Nov. 1881, even though he was eighteen years her senior. They remained in the same general area raising a family, continuing to farm and being involved in politics. He was a staunch Democrat. He was a member of the Democratic Executive Committee for many years and served as secretary in 1887. In 1890 he was a delegate to the Mississippi State Constitutional Convention in Jackson, Mississippi. He was representing both Tippah and Benton Counties.

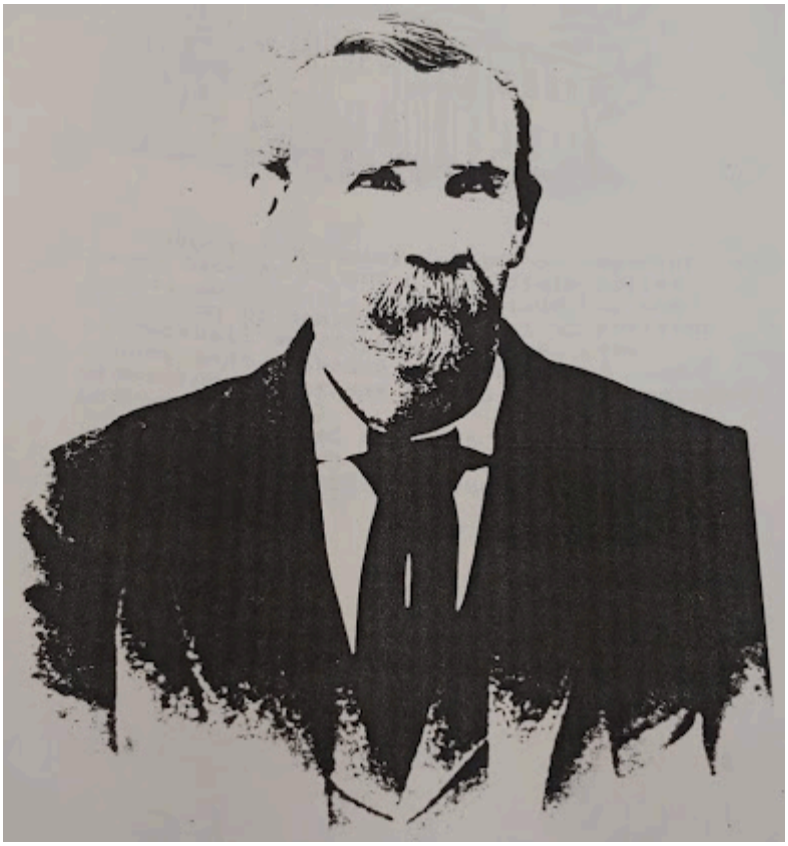
As the children by Mary Virginia were becoming of age, Allen[8] gave each of them some property. In December of 1895, he deeded each of his five children by her, 160 acres of land. The Deed Book records show the word L O V E in place of the usual word “price”.

Stubbornness is often referred to as a family trait and it must be a fact, as family tradition is that Allen[8] was seated in a political race in Benton County, and this refused to live in the same county with his opponent. In November 1909 a deed is recorded in Sharp County, Arkansas for 160 acres of land. Shortly afterwards the family moved to Sitka, Arkansas. It is believed they made the trip by train to Williford and moved the rest of the way by wagon. Allen[8] and Telisia continued selling property in Mississippi as late as 1922.

The younger children attend school at Sitka. The building was built of pine lumber and heated by a wood stove. The water carried from a spring. The family also attended the church there in the same building.

Some of the grandchildren recall visits to Grandpa and Grandma’s in the Ozarks. The long trip was taken by train, then by wagon or mail hack on to their house. The best memories of all, was swimming in the creek, picking up rocks, roaming in the woods, feeding the animals and the large crowd of people at meal time.

Late one autumn afternoon during the evening meal on 23 Oct. 1923, Allen[8] was stricken ill and died suddenly. He was buried in the nearby Hopewell Cemetery. It is an old cemetery, now rarely used, located on a hillside just off Martin Creek. Later Telisia and family moved into Williford, where she remained until her death, 10 April 1942.



ALLEN TALBOT[8]

Under the administration of Governor James Alcorn, an act of the State Legislature on July 15, 1870 provided for the formation of Benton County out of portions of Marshall and Tippah Counties. The county seat, Ashland, was organized soon after the county was formed and incorporated on March 8, 1871. Allen[8] served as first Clerk of the Chancery Court in Benton County. He served two terms, Dec. 1871 through Dec. 1875.

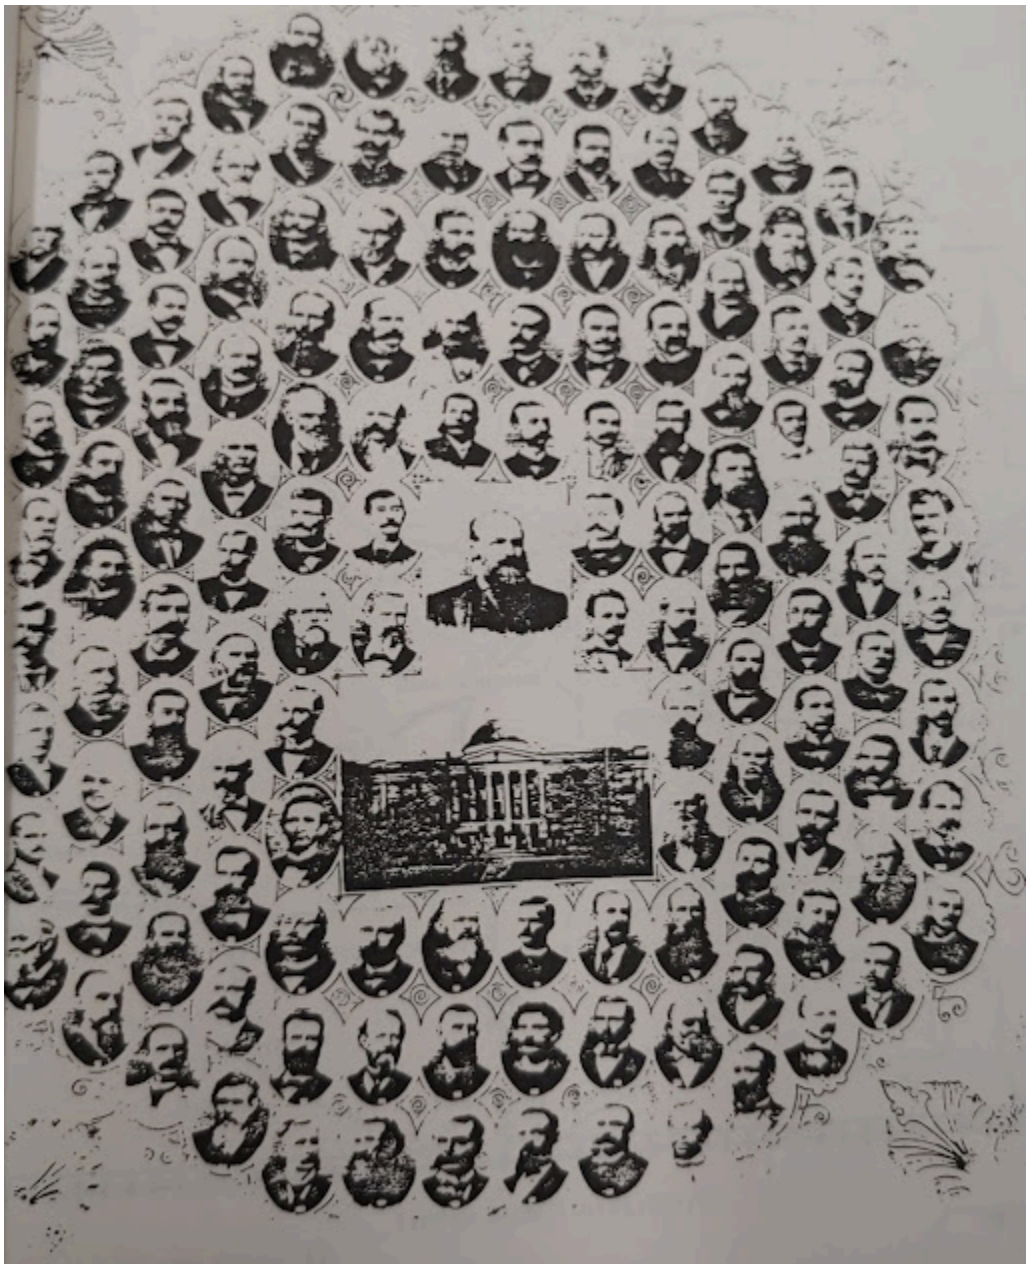
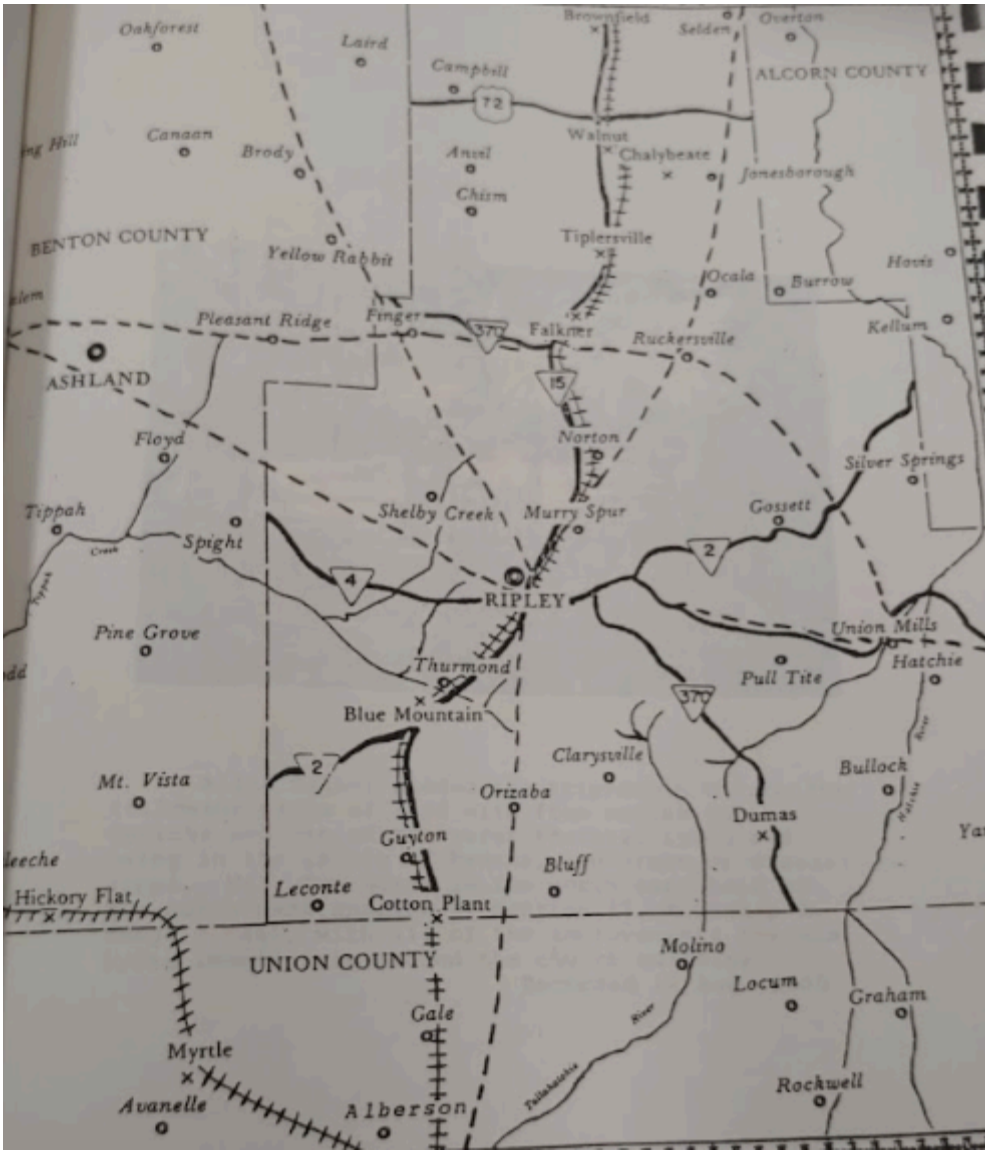
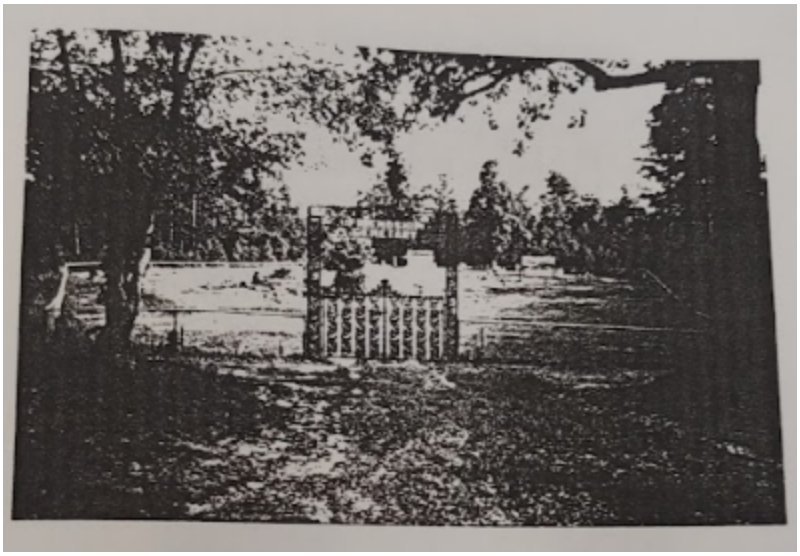
MISSISSIPPI STATE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION





TIPPAH COUNTY MISSISSIPPI



Allen Talbot[8] deeded the Friendship Church the following piece of land with free access to the springs and use of the water thereto, lying and being in the County of Benton, and State of Mississippi. Vis; Two Acres in the north east half of the north east quarter of Section 17, Township 3, Range 2 East, with all of the improvements there in lying immediately around the church building.

He married first, in Tippah County, Mississippi, 15 Jan. 1867, Mary Virginia McDonald. She was born ca 1848 in Tippah County, Mississippi, died 25 Aug. 1880 in Trussville, Alabama. Daughter of James L. and wife Eliza L. McDonald.
